Do You or Your Family Travel? Do You Worry About Luggage Security?

Here's a Way to Ensure That Your Luggage Has Not Been Tampered With At the Airport

SearchAlert is the only TSA approved padlock that Travelers can put on their luggage and KNOW whether their bags have been searched by a customs officer or violated by an unknown person when in traveling.

SearchAlert is the only padlock on the market which will let you know if your bag has been opened with its unique green / red light security window.

How does the lock work? Once the padlock has been put on your luggage, the security window will display a green light. If this lock has been opened or tampered with, the light will change from green to red. If the SearchAlert Lock shows a red light when you collect your baggage from the luggage carousel, you should then take it to the airlines luggage claim office to determine if anything is missing or if anything has been added to the bag.

Domenica Redford, Managing Director of Corporate Travel Safety said :

"With the introduction of the SearchAlert Luggage Lock, travelers can once again feel confident that their personal property is protected and at the same time feel assured that they will not be unwilling participants in an illegal activity as a carrier of illicit goods".

This new luggage lock, the only one of its kind, features a secure system which is accepted, certified and recognized by the Transportation Security Administration (TSA).

These new SearchAlert padlocks may be purchased from Corporate Travel Safety. Please contact Sheree Smythe on 02 9222 7740 or email her at sheree@corporatetravelsafety.com.au . Padlocks retail at $21.95

SearchAlert padlocks meet the needs of individuals traveling for business or pleasure, to destinations near or far and ensure that you Know whether someone has tampered with your luggage.
